SPORT NOTES

A FULL BLOWN ACE OF THE COURTS

TORONTO—Another chapter in the story of a steady, though not spectacular climb to fame in international tennis was written here when Marcel Rainville, diminutive young French Canadian star, was selected to represent Canada against the United States Davis Cup team in the matches which commenced on May 16 at the Mount Royal Tennis Club, Montreal.

The selection by the Davis Cup committee at the conclusion of the test series among the Canadian candidates was not surprising for the veterans who have ruled the tennis world in Canada for the past five years, Jack Wright and Willard Crocker, were assured of places, irrespective of the form they displayed.

The real fight for positions resolved around the three stars of lesser magnitude, Dr. Art Ham and Gilbert Nunn of Toronto, members of the team last year, and the rising threat from Montreal, Marcel Rainville. His feats on the courts during the past year, which maintained particular consideration on the part of the selection committee.

And the series among these candidates found Rainville displaying Gil Nunn for a coveted place on the team.

Rainville's position has been won nearly as much on the courts of the Southland as at the Toronto Tennis Club, for an intensive tournament campaign during the past two months in the United States brought him back to Canada playing better tennis than ever before, and possessed with a confidence in himself that he could hold his own for frequent contact with the ranking American players, and no little success against them, gave him assurance that he could hold his own with the best of them.

Action was crowded into Rainville's tour of the south, and which saw him travel the two thousand miles between Montreal and Palm Beach in four days by automobile and immediately plunge into the midst of tournament play, which continued for over two months with very little respite.

In his first tourney he was eliminated by John Hennessey, U.S. Davis Cup singles player in straight sets 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

At Orono Beach he coupled with the Jap Player, Tanie Abe, they forced the probable U.S. Davis Cup doubles pair, Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, to four sets before going out, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

In the South Atlantic State championship, Rainville encountered more top notches and won the title, defeating the former southern champion, Jack Mooney. In four sets, Abe, the favorite dropping by the wayside in an earlier round.

The North and South championships held at Pinehurst, North Carolina, brought together the greatest galaxy of stars that Rainville encountered on his itinerary, including Wilmer Allison, Johnny Van Ryn, Gilbert Hall, the Californian Griffin, the Japs, Abe and Ueda, and his fellow citizen, Dr. Jack Wright.

The quarter final of this tourney was a great event for Canada, as it saw Jack Wright, on one court defeating a U.S. cup candidate, Gilbert Hall, while on the adjoining one Rainville was putting Wilmer Allison out of the competition. Both Canadians dropped out at the semifinal, Wright extending Van Ryn, while Rainville found the cool and calculating play of the Jap, Tanie Abe, too much for him and he went out of the tourney.

At White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, in late Mason and Dixon championships, the players encountered every weather conditions, and neither got very far. Wright was taken in by Gilbert Hall, 6-4, 7-5. While Rainville fell before Elmer Griffin after an effort of 6-1, 1-6, 7-5.

This strenuous campaign culminated with exhibition matches at Richmond, Va., in which Wright, One, Abe Rainville and Gilbert Hall took part. The Canadians continuing northward to Toronto to step right in the conflict for places on the Hamilton Davis Cup team.

THEY NEED CONTROL

John Kieran, writing in the New York Times, says: "Probably the main difference between an ordinary pitcher and a great pitcher is control. Bob Grove, with all his 'stuff' was not of much use to Connie Mack until he learned how to zip the ball across the corners of the plate. Walter Heist, late of the Yankees, was a plenty of speed and the best curve that modern American league batters ever saw. 'It was a three-decker,' said Huggins, several days ago. 'It used to break on the installment plan.' 'He could curve it right around a brass bedstead,' said Charley O'Leary. But when last heard from Heist didn't even have a job. Wildness was his trouble. When he wound up, nobody knew whether the catcher, the right fielder or a stranger outside the park would get the ball. Jack Quinn and Grover Cleveland Alexander are just the opposite. These hardy generalists have control and plenty of it, which explains a good deal."

OWNER LOOKS OUT WINDS AT 38 TO 1

LEXINGTON, Ky.—C. B. Shaffer, owner of the Shaffer Stable, and as such, solely in charge of Laundry man, an unsexed son of Kwang Su Tocsin, has been going about the Kentucky Association track with his hands deep into his pockets, kicking rail posts and chewing savagely on a cigar he always neglects to light.

And the reason? Well, Laundry man went to the post in a 2-year-old allowance race the other afternoon.

Shaffer was getting down on Gardner Derr and Roy Gibson and his hands were never far from his pockets. Shaffer isn't a dummy by any means, and he figured if his horse did well, he might show. Accordingly, just for sentimental reasons, he bought a $2 show ticket.

But Gardner Derr burned out after the early running and a half mile was all the farther Roy Gibson could go. There were seven starters, but something happened to several others and when it was all over, Shaffer looked up to find that his nag had winked to the winner.

Shaffer's show ticket was worth $2.54, but he's never going to forget to have at least a lonely drive riding on the nose in the future.

MANAGER TRIMBLE THWARTS MOVES OF INSURGENTS

CHICAGO—Spring racing in Illinois did not start on schedule. Aurora's opening was called off as a result of a strike by disgruntled horsemen—the firing party brigade of racing—belonging to the Thoroughbred Horse Association. When their demands were not met by General Manager Clifford Trimble owners and trainers refused to make entries.

"Big Fat" Jones who led the one day strike at Hawthorne last summer was again in charge of the insurrection. It was admitted by several of the striking horsemen they had no complaint against the purses offered by the association, and were satisfied about the feed concessions.

What the representatives of the Thoroughbred Horse Association really demand was the collection of one percent by the association from purses won by owners. Jones frankly confessed members of his organization could not be trusted to pay into the T. H. A.

Rules of the American Turf Association prohibit the collection of any money from purses by member tracks. This was pointed out to turmen by Manager Trimble. Many desired to make entries for the opening day's program, not being in sympathy with the strike order issued by Jones.

Indications point to members of the executive committee of the Illinois Turf Association taking drastic action against the leaders. One of the rules of the organization provides any turf man is liable to fine, suspension or ruling off for practices detrimental to the best interests of racing.

Jones, a paid employee of the Thoroughbred Horse Association, is in line for disciplining by the Illinois government body. Other suitors, it is predicted, will find difficulty in securing stabling quarters at Washington Park, Lincoln Fields and Hawthorne.

It does not speak well for horsemen to demand the racing rules be broken in order to satisfy their whims," said Mr. Trimble. "I do not intend to prefer any charges, but the matter is sure to receive attention from those in charge of racing in Illinois."

Cliff Trimble, a few years ago, handled the races at the Calgary Exhibition, and is one of the surest shooters in the game. His Alberta friends will be pleased to know that he was out at the Aurora track.

CONSIDER SCHEME TO MERGE GOLD MINES

(Special to The Standard)
TORONTO—An interesting proposal here is the consolidation of all the copper heated mines in the Porcupine gold area. The idea is declared to be seriously advocated by one of the better known mining men, and one who is actively interested in a similar holder in Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines.

The adversaries met with in the Hollinger, the disappointments encountered at Coniarius, and the introduction of uncertainty regarding demand for a new mill on McIntyre are factors which are used as evidence in favor of such a merger.

Hollinger Consolidated has a plant which is alone capable of handling close to 7,000 tons of ore daily.

The deep work (3,550 feet in the Schumaker shaft) on that part of Hollinger adjacent to McIntyre would open the way to quick connection of working with lower levels of McIntyre. Also the work to 4,100 feet in depth on McIntyre would provide a way of access into lower horizons of Coniarius where any hope of important success on that property is centered.

Close observers believe the odds are not by any means in favor of such a merger being carried through. There is too much general opinion in the area that plan is feasible, and that no insurmountable obstacles exist, but that in a scheme of such magnitude the mine in question are still in too precarious a condition to be willing to concede the differences of opinion which are bound to exist in respect to the value which one operator may wish to attach to the mines of his neighbor. There is every indication that while the question of consolidation may be a subject of widespread discussion, yet the matter is one which is not likely to be of serious consideration to shareholders of either Hollinger or McIntyre for a few more years—unless, by reason of the recognized ability of the author to the proposal, the proposition might make greater headway than would otherwise appear reasonable to expect.

In these days of intensified mining the Porcupine field is growing old. It is 20 years this summer since Benj. Hollinger staked his claims, and since that time the mines of the Porcupine area have produced approximately $216,000,000 in gold. Of that total, the Hollinger mine has produced over $142,000,000 and still has over $50,000,000 estimated in ore reserves.

Canada Must Sell a Hundred Million Bushels of Wheat

(Special to the Standard)

TORONTO—Canada must sell hundred million bushels of wheat, over a fifth of the net crop for 1929, if it is to be found in the country, year for the crop which is now in the ground in the west. This, in short, is the problem which is behind the present congestion on the lakes, in the elevators, and at the terminal points. It is perhaps the problem which has never arisen in the history of Canadian wheat marketing.

Three years of superabundant crops have proved too much for the marketers of Canadian wheat, and to-day they are forced to acknowledge that the market is glutted, that they are underbid by foreign competitors, chiefly Argentina, and that there is no market in sight for the huge surplus yet last year's surplus. Grain brokers and bankers who have been in close touch with the west during the past few months, admit that grain merchants, farmers, and pool operators were very much alarmed over the state of affairs.

The gross output for 1928 was 531 million bushels of which must be added 77 million bushels carried over from the bumper crops of the year before. Of this total of 611 million bushels 41 million are classed as unmarketable or lost in cleanings, 42 million were required for seedling in Canada, 44 million, were consumed as flour, and 71 million can be carried over without increasing the surplus now on hand from last year. This leaves a total of 466 million which had to be marketed somewhere. From August 1 to the end of March of this year 310 million bushels were exported, leaving still almost a hundred million with no prospect of finding a market before a new crop will be thrown upon the consuming centres.

The majority of the Canadian wheat export trade has gone in the past 12 months through the great grain centre of Argentina. America naturally supplies itself, and has a huge surplus to export. South America is supplied from Argentina, and the Far East has depended on Australia. It is the European consumption that has fallen off and left Canada in a veritable financial lurch.

Viewed from the eastern industrial centres of the Dominion this picture of Canada's great wheat market, assuming as it does well over half the gross output, and three quarters of the net output is all the more disconcerting because it is not due to an actual decrease in the amount of wheat consumed in Europe. It is due as far as can be seen from the limited perspective of the present, to the more advantageous conditions under which our rivals have been able to approach that market during the year. Arden

Uma, for example, has been offering wheat at Liverpool around 10 to 1 cents lower per bushel.

Nor has Canada lost out in this matter because she has been unwilling to reduce her prices, to meet those of her competitors. Charges have been emanating from across the Atlantic with irritating consistency, that the Canadian pools were demanding "up" prices. Perhaps they were for a time, but they have been met by a superior grade, and has always been the first in demand by the purveyors of quality. But today the fates show that the Canadian vendors have done their utmost to retain the market. Prices on May 7 for Winnipeg wheat were $11.17 per bushel. A year ago they stood at $11.55.

The European demand has fallen off more in the last year than the export figures indicate account of the opening up of enlarged markets in the Far East which have taken some of the surplus output. But too much cannot be expected from this field, the head of a large firm of grain brokers said today, for the increase in the Far East consumption last year has largely due to the fact that Canada produced an unusually large percentage of low grade wheat, which finds a ready market in the markets of the west than in the east.

On the other hand there are those who look to the east for the solution of the problem if Canada is unable to regain her prestige in the European field. The grain export of one of the Canadian banks, told the writer that the Far East was turning from the consumption of rice to wheat. He thought that a campaign in this field similar to that of the California fruit growers exchanges, might do much towards providing a market there for any amount of wheat which Canada could afford to export.

As a solution for the immediate tie up, however, the east is out of the question. "We could never attempt to stop the tide of grain which is now flowing or has already flowed westward. It would enhance the cost to the ultimate consumer in the far east far too much. The eastern market one which must be developed year by year," this representative of Canadian banking said, "and it will be some time yet before it is a market for the high grade wheats."

The situation has led to all kinds of rumors concerning proposed remedies. The latest is from Ottawa to the effect that the Canadian banking houses are planning measures to let the farmers obtain easy credit, and thus prevent them from selling the grain for immediate delivery. It is evidence is given this by the finance houses here, though, for all point out that the banks have made all the provision possible for the present emergency.

Now watch for the gray hairs to develop. JIM COLLASON coaxing Frank Seales to roll him a cigarette, but he didn't succeed. FRED DUNN putting up quotations on the golf contest. T. E. H. A TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR in the price of tea and coffee causing Mayor Shrimpton to issue a few gray hairs. Sorry A. D.

agency. As one banker put it:

"The banks are continuing to do with the situation as they have before for some time past. We give liberal credit to the farmers — west, more liberal in fact than to other communities," said one banker. "Under the Bank Act, there is a special clause enabling the banks to take security on grain on the farms, and many farmers avail themselves of this. The banks welcome this class of trade for the security in the case of a reliable farmer is excellent. There are no needless formalities to discourage the farmer either. All he has to do is register under the Bank Act, and to sign a mortgage. The facilities are as simple as possible."

"For example a farmer has 1,000 bushels to market. He takes them to the elevator, and put them in a car. He then takes his bill of lading to the nearest bank and he will be allowed $500 to $1,000 credit on his note. The real trouble, which has to be remedied, is that there is more grain in the world than we can consume at present. It would take an enormous amount of world co-operation to achieve an international curtailment of the output even if this could be proved desirable."

THE OLD FAMILY DOCTOR

TORONTO—Speaking to a gathering of medical women, Mrs. G. Howard Ferguson has expressed a hope that will strike a responsive chord in the hearts of the laymen everywhere. "Please do not all be specialists," pleads the Premier's gracious lady, "be old-fashioned family physicians."

Medical science has made great strides in some directions during the past generation. Some of this progress is probably due to the increased tendency to specialize. Yet there is no doubt that the swing has gone too far. How often is the old-fashioned family doctor being succeeded by a young physician who intends to and can fill his predecessor's place in the community life?

Almost every Canadian family can look back at least to one general physician who was a character fit to grace the pages of any book. Had not been flung off the mare's back and broken his arm? His daughter been stricken by a sudden and severe illness that looked serious? Had grandmother suffered another heart spell? Or was mother feeling "a bit under the weather"? Send for the doctor, quick!

He came at all hours of the day or night. You could see his lantern joggling along through the darkness as sure and steady as the doctor himself. Then what a general sign of relief when he crossed the threshold. It's all right now—the doctor's here."

He brought whole generations into the world, and so he knew the strength and weaknesses of all the families. His remedies may not have been as scientific as the present kind. They had only one merit—they worked. But he was no miracle man. If the time had come when he could do no more he would kindly but clearly tell you to make a will and send for a minister. And if there was yet hope he was not himself alone calling upon Almighty God for help.

WASHINGTON CONSIDERING POLICY ANNOUNCED AT ELECTION

(Special to The Standard)

OTTAWA—The United States is thinking better of its election intention of boosting the tariff on Canadian farm products, according to unofficial reports from Washington to Ottawa. It is now stated that the tariff on stocker and feeder cattle will remain untouched.

Reports indicate that Canada is now buying goods worth $285,546,880 from the United States and only $19,126,257 to the United Kingdom. The United States is Canada's biggest customer, however, with purchases in the last fiscal year of $50,188,599. The United Kingdom bought goods worth $129,730,485 while the whole British Empire brought from Canada commodities worth $256,026,917.

The Australian trade treaty has brought Canada considerable trade from below the equator. The commonwealth bought goods valued at $19,470,305 but sold to Canada commodities worth only $2,484,426. New Zealand buys from Canada $17,857,763 and sells $12,771,239. She is the Dominion's biggest customer in the empire next to Britain and Australia.

In almost every country Canada sells more than she buys. Switzerland is an exception, her commodities totalling nearly eight millions with Canadian goods purchased less than half a million. Peru is another good salesman buying about 1 1/2 millions in exchange for products of 4 1/2 millions.

M. M. Stevens, who recently joined the Patterson Bakery staff, has been recalled home owing to the illness of his wife.

The Strathmore Cricket Club have started the season with a bang, by winning their first game of the season against the Inglewood Club of Calgary.

S. H. Crowther was a busy man on Tuesday evening, gathering up a number of wedding presents with the assistance of Fred Brown, thereby causing W. S. Patterson no end of worry. "Believe me," said Pat, "I am getting mighty suspicious of that boy and don't believe that he is truly loyal at heart to us bachelors, and he may desert at any moment. Soon Jim Gunn and me will be sole survivors and to tell the truth, I am not any too sure of myself."

"Ted" Schulte left this week for Canal Flats, and anyone seeing the supply of cakes, candies, etc. that he carried in his baggage, would say that he was a travelling representative for Patterson's Bakery, instead of dealing in amperes and kilowatts in the Canadian Pacific.

Among the new stock brokers in Calgary is the firm of Vince and Vincent. Mr. Vince, a former member, is a resident of Calgary for over 25 years, and has been most successful in every line he has handled. Anyone dealing with Mr. Vince will find him on the square. His pastime is growing dahlias and raising Rhode Island Red Poultry, and for the winning ribbons and medals for the latter he keeps a separate room in his home to display same. When he talks to Harry Freeman, of Strathmore, a discussion is solely dahlias, and how to get the good ones.

The Strathmore Baseball Club will have two games in Strathmore on May 24th, when they meet Keoma and Rockyford.

Last week the Standard typographical staff got mixed on the price of tea and coffee, and reduced the advertised price of the Strathmore Trading Co. a nickel a pound. This error caused A. D. Shrimpton and staff much grief, for which the staff is sorry and meek in spirit, and wearing sackcloth and ashes for days to come. "I, Mayor maintains that his tea and coffee at 5c is 10c per cent in quality and flavor, fit for the Gods."

George L. Peterson, of Namaka, has been elected by acclamation to the unexpired term on Bow Valley Council, of the late E. F. Whicker, and his friends are saying all kinds of nice things about him as he enters the legislative field in municipal affairs.

"King" Kelly is a Strathmore visitor, and apparently "rancher" has agreed with him, judging from his general appearance.

Councillor Hildon got on the ground of Charlie Chase, and succeeded in obtaining some nice trees to be planted at his home. He should now get busy and follow up the good work by coaxing "Charlie" for a few more to plant on Third Street, opposite the latter's home. This will be an opportunity for the new chairman of parks to get busy, as the season for planting is fast passing.

THEY HOLD VALUABLE MINERAL RIGHTS

WINNIPEG—Very considerable interest has been shown recently in the stock of the Calgary and Edmonton Corporation, Limited, traded in on the Winnipeg stock exchange. Within the past two weeks it has advanced in price from $6 per share to $12.25, closing on Friday after heavy trading at $11. The company is the outgrowth of the Calgary and Edmonton Land Co., Ltd., formed in 1921 by a group of English and Canadian financiers who purchased the land grant of the Calgary and Edmonton railway—now a part of the Canadian Pacific system. This land grant comprised every alternate section over a large portion of the province of Alberta.

Included in the properties taken over by the company were the oil, gas and mineral rights pertaining to the lands. These are held in outright ownership free of any royalty or rental and were reserved by the company when sales of land were made.

To date, only a small proportion of these rights on about 1,100,000 acres have been sold, the policy being to lease them on a cash rental plus a royalty on any production secured.

To handle these assets conveniently the Calgary and Edmonton Land Co., Ltd., was, in December last, divided or reorganized into two new companies—one the English company, to hold the lands, and the land sales contracts. The other, the Canadian company, to be known as the Calgary and Edmonton Corporation, Limited, who acquired the mineral rights.

Directors of the latter are: A. H. Young, K.C.; B. B. Hilt, H. F. P. Oiler, P. Gordon Oiler, D. C. Coleman and Patrick Burns.

The two companies are aligned as follows: Calgary and Edmonton Land Co., Ltd. (English company). Capitalization, £120,750, divided into 241,510 shares of ten shillings par value—all issued. Assets, approximately $5,000,000 acre of land (surface rights only). Cash on hand and the benefit of the land sales contracts.

Calgary and Edmonton Corporation, Ltd. (Canadian company). Capitalization, $250,000 shares of no par value, of which 241,510 are issued. Assets, mineral and petroleum rights on approximately 1,100,000 acres, $45,000.00 in cash, and all petroleum refundable rentals.

H. A. Howard, Manager

HEARD ON THE STREET

Two men were added to the habit of using very strong language. While working opposite the residence of a maiden lady, they shocked her by using some startling epithets, and she reported them to the company manager, who investigated the matter and asked for a statement from the employees.

In due course the report was received, which stated that someone had poured some hot metal down Jack's neck, and that he had simply expostulated by telling his co-worker that in future he desired that he be more careful, which, under the circumstances, was considered a very reasonable request.

At a wedding reception the young man remarked: "Wasn't it amazing the way that baby cried during the ceremony?" "It was dreadful," replied the prime little maid of honor. "When I get married I'm going to have engaged right in the corner of the invitation: 'No babies expected!'"

Early in the proceedings, one of the witnesses had occasion to refer to a "trinity set."

"What on earth is that?" asked the Judge, blinking.

The Witness: "It is a three-piece set of lady's underwear."

The Judge: "But what on earth is that?"

The Witness: "It consists of lady's knickers, a bodice, and a princess slip."

The Judge: "I still don't understand."

A sample "trinity set" was handed up to the bench for inspection.

The Judge: "Why, it looks very small!"

One of the court officials took back the filmy undergarments from the Judge, and then, in full view of the court, screwed them up in the palm of one hand and stuffed them in his trousers' pocket. The Judge was entranced.

Dad (severely): "And, look here, Ethel, you mustn't encourage that young man to stay so late every night. What does your mother say about it?"

Ethel: "She says men haven't altered a bit, Dad!"

A farmer said to a land girl who called in response to an advertisement: "I advertised for a shepherd, not a shepherdess."

Land Girl: "I know that but surely there is no reason why the work should not be undertaken by a woman?"

Farmer: "Well, a woman once tried it and she made a mess of it."

Land Girl: "Who was she?"

Farmer: "Bo Peep."

"The world's a small place," said the bore. "For instance, at Easter in Paris I met a man who lives in the next road to me. Later I met him in Venice, then in Rome, again in Alexandria, and finally I crossed the channel with him. What do you think of that?"

"Why didn't you pay him what you owed him in the first place?" asked the little man in the corner.

Yes, we can remember when Grandpa was several petticoats and other unmentionable armor, and we also know why girls of today can get along with less. Modern parlor suits are not upholstered with horse hair.

"Ah, madam," said the pious visitor, "I am going about giving advice and consolation to unhappy wives. Do you know where your husband is every night?"

"Indeed, I do."

"Alas, madam. You think you do but he may be here, there, anywhere."

"Well, if he gets out of the place where he is now, he has to raise a granite slab that weighs at least a ton, and he couldn't even lift a seat of coal while he was alive."

Two darkies were under a tree in a violent thunder shower.

"Julius, can you pray?"

"No, Sam, Ah nebber prayed in my life."

"Well, can you sing a hymn?"

"No, Sam, don't know no hymn."

"Well, see heah, Julius, sumtin' 'Gious' 'g'ot to be done mighty and den. S'pose you pass round the contribution box."

"We have Ampelepele witchi creeping all over our house," said one of Jim Moran's clients.

Jim: "That's the worst part of these old houses; you are bound to get something like that."

George (from next door): "Mrs. Blank, may I use your telephone?"

Mrs. Blank: "Certainly, George, is your out of order?"

George: "Well, not exactly, but she is using it to hold up the window, and cutting biscuits with the mouth piece, and baby's teething on the cord."

Dr. Haworth (extracting nail from tire of his car): "Steady now! You won't even feel this."

He: "Darling, is it yet the psychological moment to ask your crabbled old dad for your hand?"

She: "It is, my hero—he is sitting in his stocking feet."

The old gentleman was a trifle bewildered at the elaborate wedding. "Are you the bridegroom?" he asked a melancholy-looking young man.

"No, sir," replied the young man. "I was eliminated in the semi-finals."

"See here," the inspector said to the native chief, "it is a violation of the law to have more than one wife, and the law must be obeyed. When you get back home you tell all of your wives, except one, that they can no longer look upon you as their husband."

"You tell 'em," suggested the Indian after a moment's reflection.

"An' do ye think he looks like his father?"

"Of do that, but don't ye mind, Mrs. Murphy, just so long as the child is healthy."

Floorwalker (rebuking assistant for contradicting a customer): "Miss Jones, remember, in this establishment the customer is always right."

Miss Jones: "Well, sir, she said you were an old shark."

A Calgary man living in a large apartment house came home late one night and discovered he had forgotten his key to the street door.

"Oh, honey," he yelled to his wife on the third floor, "throw down your key."

The next moment he was knocked unconscious by the hall of keys on the stairwalk.

Mistress: "When do you think you could come? You see, I've got the spring cleaning to consider."

Ma: "Well, I could come about three weeks from today, if you are quite sure you could get it all finished before then."

"Young man," said the elderly lady to the aviator, "I want to ask you what kind of a dog that is."

"He's a mastiff."

"Well, the idea! A man over there said he was a mascot."

Bill Tierney says: "Many a bachelor ship has been wrecked by a permanent wave."

Jim Moran has come to the conclusion that a Scotch fisherman may use artificial bait, but that his lies are absolutely genuine.

EDISON DOES NOT INCLUDE CANADA

LONDON, Ont.—Thomas A. Edison's search for a brilliant young man to be trained to carry on the torch of his genius cannot be extended to Canada. The great inventor's plan, recently announced, is to select a clever school day school boy from each state in the Union, and to find the most promising of the 49 by means of a questionnaire. Then he will give the chosen youth a college training and presumably every opportunity to qualify in the field of research as "Edison's successor."

A suggestion was made to Mr. Edison that Canada be included in the eligible territory. A message from East Orange, N.J. brought word to day that the suggestion had been given consideration, but since announcement had already been made limiting the contest to the United States, a change was not deemed possible. It was pointed out to Mr. Edison that during his own boyhood he was a resident of Canada himself, and any search on an Edison at that time would have been in vain if it had been confined to the United States.

WORLD WHEAT SITUATION SHOWS INCREASED CONSUMPTION

The Royal Bank has issued a most interesting letter upon the wheat situation:

It is estimated that the prepared wheat acreage in the three Prairie Provinces is nearly a million acres larger than a year ago, and this fact, together with reports that the moisture content of the soil is now satisfactory, would indicate that the 1929 crop prospects may be regarded as promising. Despite the increase in the Canadian wheat acreage, however, the prospective world area for 1929 crops is somewhat below that of 1928. According to the United States Department of Agriculture, the 1929 wheat area in thirteen countries has been reported at 117,029,000 acres, representing a decrease of 4 per cent. from 121,622,000 acres of 1928. While the unusually severe winter in Europe was detrimental to the winter wheat, the exact extent of its influence is not yet known. In most regions heavy snowfalls are thought to have mitigated serious damage, although winter cereals in the Danube Basin are believed to have suffered considerably. Roumania received the most serious setback reported, with one-half of the grain acreage lacking snow cover during the height of the frost. Reports of crop conditions in North Africa and India are only slightly less favourable than those of similar periods in previous years. In India, the government's plan to increase greatly the acreage sown to spring crops has not been entirely carried out, and several important wheat producing sections have reported that the area actually sown to new crops has been from 12 to 18 per cent below last year.

As regards total world wheat production in 1928, fairly comprehensive figures are now at hand. Exclusive of China and Russia, the 1928 crop has been estimated at 3,780 million bushels compared with 2,605 million bushels in 1927. The Canadian estimate was recently revised upward by nearly 23,000,000 bushels, making a total of 325,572,000 bushels as compared with 279,665,000 bushels in 1927. Both the Canadian and the world crop figures constitute new high records of production. The United States, the Australian crops for 1928 were among the best ever harvested, while the Danube Countries had the largest crops since the war. High average yields also accompanied these increases in production. The average yield per acre for all wheat in Canada in 1928 was 22.1 bushels; in the United States, the yield has been reported at over 20 bushels per acre.

As a result of this large production and yield, world export surpluses at the end of 1928 were unprecedentedly high. Prices during the summer consequently ranged lower in the principal wheat markets than at any time since the 1923-24 year, and by last December, had only partially recovered from their drop. After the turn of this year, however, cash wheat prices showed much improvement. By the end of February, they stood at the highest level since July, but since then they have averaged somewhat lower.

Among the causes which have been responsible for the upward tendency since the autumn, certain factors stand out prominently. Of these, probably the most important has been the rapid consumption of the wheat supplies by both European and extra-European countries. Net shipments of wheat and flour from the principal exporting countries from July 1 to the end of March amounted to 631 million bushels as compared with 520 million for the corresponding period of last year. Evidence of these heavy shipments may be seen in the reduced stocks of Canadian grain in North America at the end of March. Though stocks amounting to 189,656,000 bushels a year ago, the increase was practically counterbalanced by the smaller farm holdings this year as compared with 1928. At present, total stocks of Canadian grain are estimated to be approximately 15 million bushels above the previous year's figure.

In Europe, the heavy procurements of wheat have been largely due to the failure of the 1928 corn crop and the lower prices prevailing for foreign wheat. The trade has chiefly taken the form of hand-to-mouth purchases rather than concrete forward buying. Higher per capita consumption has also been evident and much of the wheat purchased has been used to replace corn as feed grain. This materially helped to reduce the stocks in Europe which had accumulated as a result of the bumper crop. In the north, inferior supplies were heavily drawn on through the freezing of rivers and harbours, and the disruption of railway traffic, which prevented imported grains from reaching their destination. This was only tem-

CANADIAN WEALTH INCREASED BY HALF BILLION

OTTAWA—The farms, the forest, the mines and the fisheries are piling up wealth for Canada, the fiscal year figures in the way of exports showing a tremendous preponderance for these natural products. The farms supplied half the export which totalled $1,363,586,672.

Canada's most valuable export is wheat. British and foreign countries paid $428,521,328 to the Dominion for her wheat no less than $76,242,228 bushels being shipped out. In addition the Dominion exported four worth $45,117,719. Taken in to the grain and grain products exported from Canada in the 12 months ending March 31, 1929, reached the magnificent total of $553,857,851.

The farms also shipped out $17,034,157 worth of living animals; $25,181,833 worth of cheese; Eggs $219,169; Fruits $5,917,152; Hay, $1,127,120; Hides and Skins, $9,479,891; Leather, $9,591,000; Meats, $19,184,930; Milk and Cream, $6,588,225; Condensed milk, $3,730,745; Flax seed and clover seed, $7,620,000; Tobacco, $2,007,948; Vegetables, $6,083,673.

The mines provided metals worth $194,911,511 to be exported, while the forests supplied $91,675,675 worth of unmanufactured wood; $17,166,122 of manufactured wood and $148,948,864 of paper. The fisheries exports totalled $24,982,115.

Toronto Inventor

(Special to the Standard)
(Copyright)

TORONTO, Ont.—All known laws of power transmission are refuted by the discovery of an entirely new principle of mechanics, applicable to power units in everything from bicycles to battleships. Joseph Dawson, Toronto inventor asserts.

The possibilities of the mechanism are myriad, Mr. Dawson predicts, and the influence it may have on modern industry is staggering. After careful consideration of his radical departure in crank construction, the United States bureau of aerodynamics invited the inventor to come to Washington to explain its operation. Mr. Dawson is now in the Capital. Scientists, including Thomas Edison, see the day when a handful of cost will run a factory for a week. The Toronto inventor claims that his adoption of a mathematical principle, old as that science of mathematics itself, will make this possible. The rotary crank, considered 95 per cent. efficient by engineers and mathematicians, will be supplanted by a reciprocal crank involving a mechanical interpretation of the Archimedes screw, by actual test one-third more efficient.

"I know it can't be done according to mechanical laws," Mr. Dawson said, "but I've done it." And the testing department of the Hydro-Electric Commission, as well as Professor R. T. Rutledge of Queen's University, support him in his astounding statement.

The human mind accustomed to seeing crack express trains drawn by steam locomotives cutting up tons of coal every run, cannot readily visualize these same trains drawn by a series of new crank actions, multiplying the feeble power of a small electric motor such as an ordinary used for turning hand lathes.

The harnessing of the latent energy of motion has been successfully accomplished, Mr. Dawson and his associates are convinced. Mr. Dawson's invention is no mere chance discovery, but the result of years of patient effort and experiment on an idea first conceived by his father the late John Dawson, after an intensive study of "ancient factors" as contained in the works of Archimedes, the ancient scholar.

Within the past week Dawson has taken out $5500 insurance on his life with the Great Western Life Assurance Co. made payable to his company, the Dawson Reciprocal Crank Action Ltd., of Toronto.

Canadian and United States patents have already been granted. Patents are pending in Great Britain, France and Germany. The Canadian patent office granted its papers on February 19, only 21 days after the filing of the case. This is believed to be a record for early allowance in the patent office at Ottawa. Due to the international importance of the invention, it was made a special application and the papers rushed through the official procedure. Every claim made by the inventor was allowed and the principles of mechanism involved were recognized, despite the axioms of mechanics law which state that such feats are physically impossible.

Mr. Dawson produced a record of this of this departure in power transmission, shown by J. G. Burley of the Hydro-Electric power commission laboratories, stating that the reciprocal crank action required only 2.11 units to do as much work as 2.81 when used with the universally adopted rotary crank.

Most of the power production of the world is in the form of rotary motion as in the revolving shaft of a motor. The possibilities of a series of reciprocating cranks, each "stepping up" the power generated by the other, present a vista of mechanical revolutions which baffles human understanding. Ships, factories, trams, all operated by tiny power plants, stagger the imagination of even the most fanciful.

The governments of Canada and the United States are fully alive to the possibilities of anything pertaining to power production. The national advisory committee, with constant search into the merits of the Dawson invention and the United States has requested full information. Mr. Dawson has requested an interview with the British war office, however, and he will offer full rights of his crank action to Britain first.

Jim Moran, advising one of his Scotch friends to buy a certain oil stock, upon which he had some inside information. The Scotchman was impressed with Jim's theory, and agreed to buy one hundred shares, if Jim would bet one hundred dollars that they would bring in an oil well. That fellow wouldn't buy sold dollars for ninety cents, said Jim.
